TITLE PAGE

A research paper title page is the first page of your research paper. It’s essential to come up with title page that gives the readers an overview of the research. A title page should include a research paper title, page number, author’s name and author’s affiliations. It should also follow the innervated pyramid format. (Below is an example of a title page in a research.)

APPROVAL SHEET

- is a document that the author/s submit to the scholarly panel in requesting approval of the work.

The study intends to determine the common factors leading to depression among grade 12 senior high school students of Asian Learning Center. The grade 12 senior high school students year 2018-2019 were selected to be the respondents with 261 randomly chosen senior high school students. The study was conducted in Asian Learning Center, Pajo Lapu-Lapu City. The research used the questionnaires adopted from Aaron Beck's Depression Inventory to identify the levels of depression. The percentage was used to compute and analyze the answers of the respondents with the help of the interpretation of a psychologist. The result of the study showed that the factors leading to depression were the negative view of the self and somatic/physical function factors wherein in the morning session punishment feelings and tiredness and fatigue were found to be the top and the least cause of depression. In the afternoon session, past failures and change of sleeping pattern were the top and the least cause of depression while self-criticalness and change of sleeping pattern were found to be the cause of depression among the night session.

Almighty father who gave us the knowledge, strength and wisdom to guide us in our journey and most especially to the researchers themselves...

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

- In a research paper, an acknowledgement refers to the section at the beginning of your thesis formatting where you can express your appreciation of the people who contributed during your research project. It is up to you to determine who you are most grateful to for helping you with your research.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The Researchers would like to express their sincere appreciation and profound gratitude to all the people who made this study possible. They served as the pillars for the Researchers all throughout the frustrating obstacles and the difficulties they have experienced in the journey.
